About Anhui Medical University

Anhui Medical University, formerly known as Shanghai Southeastern Medical College, is one of the key universities in Anhui Province. Established on May 29th, 1926, relocated to its present place and renamed Anhui Medical College in 1949. It officially became Anhui Medical University in June 1996.

There are 23 academic departments, such as the First Clinical College (the First Affiliated Hospital), the Provincial Clinical College (the Affiliated Provincial Hospital), the Second Clinical College (the Second Affiliated Hospital), the Third Clinical College I (Hefei No. 1 Hospital), the Forth Clinical College I (Hefei No. 2 Hospital), Hangzhou Clinical College (Hangzhou No. 3 Hospital in Zhejiang Province), College of Mental and Health Clinic and other clinics, College of Stomatology (the Affiliated Dental Hospital) Graduate School, etc. The university has a faculty of 4889 teaching and providing medical services, among whom are 386 professors, 741 associate professors, and over 138 doctoral graduates. At present there are 8374 undergraduates, 830 postgraduates and doctoral students. The university consists of two parts—the main campus and the southern campus covering entirely an area of 860000 square meters. Its library has a collection of 720000 volumes and 20000 kinds of periodical and journals as well as e-journals. It is equipped with a campus computer network, which is also a center in Anhui for sharing biological and medical information across the nation on Internet. The library has broad relations with other libraries, schools and research institutions both at home and abroad. Anhui Medical University has built up close links with other higher institutions in some European countries, America and Japan. The establishment of research centers is the result of collaborations with Harvard University and Mayo Clinic in the USA, Sino-Canada Children Foundation, Karolinska Medical Institute in Sweden and Osnabruck University of Applied Sciences in Germany respectively.
