About Fudan University

It is located at Shanghai, the most populous city of China and spreads over four campuses in Handan, Jiangwan, Fenglin and Zhangjiang. It is well-established to be known as one of the selective and most esteemed universities in China

It holds the record of producing the most number of alumni into the Chinese government services. There are altogether 29 schools and departments under the university providing numerous course programs at undergraduate, masters and doctoral level along with twenty-five research postings offering postdoctoral fellowships. And it is distinguished as one of the best medical universities in China. The university houses over 2,481 qualified and expert faculties, consisting of both full-time teachers and researchers who are accredited for their outstanding accomplishments nationally and is constantly expanding its faculty stratum by recruiting talented young minds. They together are involved in carrying out integrating tasks to blend several disciplines of education and the copious resources available in the university. This finally leads to the establishment of an exceptional and ever-evolving curriculum and management system, making it to be ranked as one of the top mbbs universities in china. There are around 10 teaching hospitals offering world-class medical services to the public like Zhong-shan Hospital and Hua-shan Hospital affiliated with the university, where the student doctors are been offered the clinical and practical education and allowing them further to conduct advanced scientific researches. The most significant feature that supplements the reasons that makes Fudan University to be reputed as best mbbs university in china is the recent incubation of sophisticated industrial establishments and active reassurance provided for them to translate knowledge into power. This has been proven to be beneficial for both these industries and the University. The former earned profits whereas the latter could establish a spectacular research environment by industrialising it.
